Welcome by Paulo Casaca, SADF Executive Director

Presentation by Dr Hhrishikesh Kulkarni, MD, Senior Vice President, Fresenius Kabi

Moderation: Dr Siegfried O. Wolf, SADF Director of Research

Access to clean drinking water in India is a problem that seems to be getting more severe by every year. However, recently in parts of India the picture is slowly changing towards the better. Reporting from the field is Dr Kulkarni, who has just returned from Chilewadi village in Maharashtra state, India, where people have come together to solve water problems by combining science with the society and sense. The presentation will be based on interviews with people working on the ground, who make good things happen in circumstances hardly anyone thought could improve.

Dr Hrishikesh Kulkarni, MD is a Senior Vice President at Fresenius Kabi, a global health company focused on generic drugs, infusion therapies and clinical nutrition. He has been employed by Fresenius since 1995 and has since then successively worked on India, Asia Pacific and Global levels. In relation to his profession, he has published extensively on medical research, and remains an active participant in international medical conferences. Dr Kulkarni is also a member of the Executive Committee of the India Business Forum which promotes commercial and cultural exchange between India and Germany.
